1. Text

Dear Jennifer,

You asked me to write something about my experience with everyday shopping in the Czech Republic to you. Well, I have to warn you first. It's a brave question and I hope you won't be disappointed by what I am going to write.

About two days ago I read a newspaper article saying that there are more supermarkets here than in other countries in all of Europe. "This can't be true," I thought. However, when you look around, it's just like that. And it's getting even worse. I am standing at a bus stop and I hear one lady saying to another: "Have you heard? They are going to build a new shopping centre on the edge of the town. How wonderful!" I can hardly understand her enthusiasm. I have never been keen on shopping, you know. It's something we have to do, of course, but why should I feel so excited about it? And this is only the beginning. The worst experience starts when you go shopping yourself.

Luckily I live near a supermarket, so I don't have to drive anywhere. I come into the supermarket and look! There aren't any free trolleys. Ok, I wait in the queue of unhappy customers and when I finally get to one trolley I find out that I haven't got the proper coin to put in so that I am able to take it. I ask one of the ladies at the till if she would be so kind to give me change for my note while the people in the trolley queue start frowning. It has happened to me so many times. Then I do my shopping. And when I finally return to the same lady the bill is too high. I have to pay by credit card, which causes both the shop assistant and the people behind me to frown again. I could go on like this for hours. So, to say it simply, there might be people who enjoy shopping, but I certainly don't belong among them.

Mike
